Juniors Get “BACK TO THE BASICS”

with 1999 LEAD Conference in Saint Joseph, Mo.

“Back to the Basics” was the theme for the 1999 LEAD (Leaders Engaged in Angus Development) Conference. There was not a better place to have the conference than at the Angus headquarters in Saint Joseph, Mo. Juniors from all over the country gathered to learn more about the American Angus Association and the Angus breed.

The speakers enlightened attendees with the breed's vision, history, “firsts” for the Angus breed, Angus cattle and their role in the market, the importance of using genetics to increase quality, and policies facing the beef industry today. Casey and Stewart Kennedy, leadership trainers, added both a humorous and a motivating touch in getting their thoughts across to the audience.

The National Junior Angus Board conducted workshops that challenged juniors to reflect on their ethics, values and the importance of respecting others with honesty and understanding.

A favorite among the juniors was the roundtable discussion. During this session juniors were encouraged to “brag” about what their state has done and how it has worked for them. The purpose of this session was to discuss opportunities, ideas and problems that a state might have, and, as a group, to come up with a solution to take back to their state. Some state associations, such as Kentucky and California, already have had state LEAD conferences.

The conference is not just full of learning objectives, but also offers time to unwind with friends. This year there were several outings that took place. One evening Conley Angus Ranch hosted a dinner and fun night, which included a judging contest and vespers. The entire conference was rounded off with a dinner and dance on the Spirit of St. Joseph riverboat.

The main purpose of LEAD is to educate and motivate juniors to become leaders of tomorrow. If interested in hosting a state LEAD Conference, contact James Fisher, and he can discuss plans with your state. Any junior who has not attended a LEAD Conference should do so soon. LEAD is not only a chance to learn more and become more understanding of the Angus industry, but it is an awesome opportunity to meet others from across the country!

Make plans to attend the next LEAD Conference in July 2000 at Fort Collins, Colo.

— Jamie Meier

More than 100 junior Angus members from 23 states attended the 1999 LEAD Conference in Saint Joseph, Mo. Above participants join in one of the many group activities.

Association Board announces new rules and policies

The American Angus Association Board of Directors adopted this policy statement at their September 1999 meeting. In addition, the possession rule as applicable to the National Junior Angus Show, Eastern and Western regional junior angus shows, and regional preview junior Angus shows was changed to read as follows:

POLICY STATEMENT OF THE AMERICAN ANGUS ASSOCIATION

Set forth below are those rules that the American Angus Association has adopted for use at its national, regional and regional preview junior Angus shows. The Association would like to use this space to publicly reaffirm its commitment and dedication to these shows of the National Junior Angus Association. Junior Angus shows are primarily held to foster the interests of the participating junior members in the Angus breed, as well as to provide them with a special hands-on opportunity to breed, raise and show Angus cattle. The intended emphasis in the junior shows has always been on competition among peers, as well as the development of leadership skills, decision-making skills and a sense of responsibility.

Some of these rules are necessarily based on the honesty and integrity of the participating junior member, as well as his or her parents. Many of the most basic rules of the American Angus Association are similarly based. If any participating junior member has any question or concern about what a particular rule means, she or he should write to James Fisher, Director of Junior Activities, 3201 Frederick Ave., Saint Joseph, MO 64506-2997, or e-mail him at jfisher@angus.org to obtain an interpretation. The Association will periodically report on significant interpretations of these rules in the Angus Journal.

ELIGIBILITY OF EXHIBITORS AND ENTRIES

Junior member exhibitors shall maintain actual possession of their entries from the ownership deadline through the final day of the show. However, family possession of the entries shall also be permitted.

NOTE: It is the intent of this rule that the junior member exhibitor should be the individual with primary responsibility for the actual day-to-day care of the entry. This rule recognizes situations may arise where the care and/or possession of an entry may also be shared by a member of the immediate family of the junior member exhibitor.

Young Angus enthusiasts recognized with scholarships

Each year members of the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA) are recognized and rewarded through our scholarship programs. In 1999, $36,000 were awarded on a national level to deserving juniors pursuing higher education. These members of the NJAA have exemplified enthusiasm for the Angus breed, the NJAA and their state associations.

Additionally, each of these scholarship recipients has led by example by excelling academically and participating in numerous extracurricular activities. The scholarships that recognize and reward these outstanding juniors are sponsored by the Certified Angus Beef (CAB) Program, the American Angus Auxiliary, and the Angus Foundation. The CAB Program/NJAA Scholarship is given to a junior currently majoring in an agricultural degree related to the beef industry. The 1999 recipient was Janelle Sommers of Silver Lake, Ind. Janelle received a $1,000 scholarship to aid in her studies.

For the past 43 years the American Angus Auxiliary has provided scholarships to deserving high school seniors. In 1999, $15,000 were awarded to 10 outstanding applicants. Placing first through fifth respectively in the girls' competition were Jessica Sawyer, Bassett, Neb.; Whitney Trospen, Hamilton, Mo.; Laura Hooper, Bliss, Idaho; Becca Penner, Mill Creek, Okla.; and Emily Hartzell, Shawano, Wis. Placing first through fifth respectively in the boys' competition was Ryan Sweeney, Mason, Mich.; Brandon New, Leavenworth, Kan.; Darren Eversole, Blacksburg, Va.; Karl Holshouser, Gold Hill, N.C.; and Jace Grabouski, Beatrice, Neb.

1999 marked the second year that the Angus Foundation awarded scholarships. The Angus Foundation awards $2,500 to its two top applicants and $1,000 to 15 other outstanding applicants for a grand total of $20,000. This year the two $2,500 recipients were Rhonda Nida of Red Rock, Okla., and Betsie Ebert of Lexington, N.C. The 15 $1,000 recipients were Tom Patterson, Columbus, Mont.; Julie

Rowland, Gamaliel, Ky.; Jessica Sawyer, Bassett, Neb.; Kami Krebs, Gordon, Neb.; Laura Hooper, Bliss, Idaho; Lana Myers, Jennings, La.; Anne Schmalenberger, Vincent, Iowa; Lindsey Trospen, Hamilton, Mo.; Ryan Sweeney, Mason, Mich.; Karl Holshouser, Gold Hill, N.C.; Julie Dameron, Lexington, Ill.; John Melton, Bridgewater, Va.; Jesse McCurry, Sedgwick, Kan.; Melissa Pickrell, Paris, Ky.; and Becca

Penner, Mill Creek, Okla.

Many thanks go out to everyone who has helped make these scholarships possible, including the CAB Program, the American Angus Auxiliary and contributors to the Angus Foundation.

Congratulations to all of the 1999 scholarship recipients!

— John Melton

THE CHAIRMAN'S PERSPECTIVE:

Don't forget to say 'thank you'

We've all made great memories through our activities involving our cattle projects and our junior associations. The friends we make, the places we travel and the opportunities we have — all contribute to our active involvement. But all too often, we forget what has enabled us to get where we are. Without the help of our parents, as well as advisors and other adults, we would not be able to actively participate in these programs.

As a National Junior Angus Association (NJAA) member in my last year of eligibility, I would like to offer some advice to junior members of all ages — PLEASE thank the people who have helped you along the way. And do it NOW! You'd be surprised just how far a simple hug and a thank you will go. Remember how and why they've helped you along the way, and let them know that it has not gone unnoticed.

For without them, an organization like the NJAA is simply impossible!

Dear Mom and Dad,

Thank you for that very first heifer. Thank you for traveling thousands of miles so that I could show my single entry.

Thank you for all the constructive criticism (even when I didn't know just how constructive it was!).

Thank you for the constant encouragement when I walked out of the ring with a ribbon color that we didn't even know existed!

Thank you for the support you provided outside of the showring as well.

Thank you for all of these things. Without these opportunities that you have provided, I never would have made the friendships that I will now have forever. I never would have chosen the career path that I am about to approach. But most importantly, I am thankful for everything you've done so that I may now realize the importance of dedication, leadership, and family strength.

Thank you, Mom and Dad, for all that you've done!

Spotlight on GEORGIA & MISSOURI

State junior Angus associations

Georgia Junior Angus Association

The Georgia Junior Angus Association, with approximately 150 members, is an extremely successful organization. Activities are planned together as an association and carried out as a group. The older members use this opportunity to assist the younger members and to work as a team.

Allison Porter, president, attributes the group's success to the support the junior members receive from the adult association. "I'd like to thank the adult association for all of their great help," she says.

Georgia Junior Angus Advisor Donna Porter says, "As an advisor/parent, it restores our faith in the youth of today, and it has been a rewarding experience to work with the Georgia group."

Missouri Junior Angus Association

The Missouri Junior Angus Association has nearly 175 members. President Lacey Robinson says that the best thing about their association is the willingness to include everyone and to keep them active members. All of the junior members are incredibly interested in the future of the Angus breed and are devoted to making their future a successful one.

Kim Herd, advisor, says that in order to keep this organization strong, letters are sent to new NJAA members from Missouri inviting them to join the Missouri Junior Angus Association. They get this list from the American Angus Association's Junior Activities Department. Robinson adds, "I am very excited to know the future is bright with the junior members coming up."

Davis on the Highlands donates Foundation Heifer

The 2000 Angus Foundation Heifer Package is being donated by Davis on the Highlands, Springfield, Ky. Joe B., Sandra, Ashley and Anne Nicole Davis have been avid supporters of the Angus Foundation and have been actively involved over the years with junior Angus programs. In fact, the 2000 offering, Davis Polly 8506, is a bred heifer and a descendant of the Foundation Heifer purchased by the Davis family in 1994.

The heifer package will be auctioned off at the National Western Stock Show in Denver, Colo., preceding the National Western Angus Bull Sale on Jan. 13.

The sale of the heifer package is one of the major sources of revenue to the Angus Foundation, which supports youth, education and research in the Angus breed. These monies support Foundation Scholarships, the Outstanding Leadership Award, the LEAD Conference, and the Bronze, Silver and Gold awards. Not only does the Foundation benefit more than 10,500 junior Angus members across the country, but it also benefits the entire Angus industry.

Life LESSONS

I've discovered that it is not whether you reach your goal that is most important, but what you learn along the way. As I look back on my show career, what I remember most are not the trophies, banners or blue ribbons, but how the experiences that I had and the wonderful people whom I met contributed to who I am today. The following are bits and pieces of information that I have attained from various individuals over the years. I hope these words encourage and challenge you just as they have me.

I've learned that we must always have faith in ourselves and what we can accomplish.

I've learned that you will get out of life only what you are willing to put in.

I've learned that it doesn't always matter if you are the best, but only that you give it your best effort.

I've learned that winning is a lousy way of keeping score.

I've learned to let my optimism work to make my dreams come true.

I've learned that you are remembered for what you give and not for what you take.

I've learned that the best preparation for tomorrow is to do your best today.

I've learned that it's important to learn from your mistakes, but not to dwell on them.

I've learned to work on my weaknesses until they become my strong points; that experience is the best policy.

I've learned the importance of hard work and dedication.

I've learned that I can make a difference, even if it is a small difference, because those small differences over time will make a big difference.

I've learned that a happy person does not have a certain set of circumstances, but a certain set of attitudes.

I've learned that courage is not defined by those who fought and won, but by those who fought, fell and then rose again.

I've learned that sometimes the people you expect to kick you when you're down will be the ones who help you get back up.

I've learned that it is not the possessions in life, but the friends that you have made along the way, that really count.

"SHOW ME the Money"

DONETA
ILLUSTRATIONS

All organizations across the country need money to carry out their daily activities. But where does all of this money come from? Sure, many organizations charge annual dues to help with expenses, but they also spend a great amount of their time fund-raising.

As members of our state associations, we are constantly looking for ways to raise money. Some of the typical fund-raisers include such things as silent auctions, raffles, concessions and selling Angus items. However, many of us are looking for new ways to raise that much-needed cash.

One of these fund-raisers is to have a cow wash. Find a show in your state that takes place over a weekend or that lasts a couple of days. Have the juniors in your association advertise for the event with posters, handouts or by word-of-mouth. Then on the designated day charge a fee to rinse, soap, and brush other participants' cattle. The only cost to your association would be the soap, and you could make a quick profit.

Another fund-raiser that some states use to make money is the auctioning off of an unusual item. The item is kept for a year and then reauctioned off the following year. One state auctions off an old jacket with Angus decals on it. The person or farm that purchases this jacket gets advertisement in the junior newsletter and is recognized at the state preview show. The next year they are recognized again, and the item is auctioned off again.

These are just a few of the many fund-raisers in which your state can participate to help boost the bank account. If your state has an unusual way of making money, send those ideas to the Junior Activities Department. The Board will highlight the ideas in futures issues of Directions.

And don't forget, the first three letters in fund-raiser are F-U-N. So have fun and good luck with your moneymaking projects!

Your checkoff dollars at work

Your checkoff dollars were created as a self-help promotion, research and information program. The programs that were developed help to fight for the success of the beef industry.

One of the main goals is to stimulate consumers to buy more beef. This can be done through programs such as New Product Development.

Currently the National Cattlemen's Beef Association is supporting and running what they call R&D Ranch.

R&D (Research and Development) is "where beef innovations are born." R&D's mission is to "serve as a catalyst for beef and veal product innovation." R&D Ranch has developed and has helped packers come up with 30 different beef products since August. Such a product as Rotiss-A-Roast, a ready-to-eat alternative to rotisserie chicken, provides new opportunities for undervalued cuts of beef while fighting back against the chicken industry.

Rotiss-A-Roast is processed from the center muscle of the cow's knuckle, which comes from the round. Meat processors have traditionally cut through the muscles around the knuckle, which resulted in a low-quality meat that turned off consumers and usually ended up as ground beef. However, these muscles can be cut up separately and turned into excellent steaks that can be sold for about $4/pound.

Other products that have been developed include swiss steak that has holes in it just like a White Castle hamburger, coffee-flavored burgers, and hamburgers with tiny pieces of cheese mixed in. Although some of these products may never make it to the market, the strategy that goes into the innovations is capitalizing on consumer trends. In today's society there are fewer people who want to cook when they get home from work. The result is the innovation of steaks and beef that are quick and simple to prepare.

The beef industry is trying to meet consumer's needs rather than trying to change consumer's minds. The focus of the industry is on the consumer. The development of new products at R&D Ranch is consumer-driven with the idea of benefiting the market share of the beef industry.

NJAA Web site continues to improve

In the "Age of Technology" many companies and organizations are making strides to become more available to their members and employees by launching new forms of Internet communication. The American Angus Association and the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA) are no exception.

Many of you may have noticed the changes made this spring to the NJAA Web site, www.angus.org/njaa. While our resources are limited in terms of maintaining the Web site, it will, as promised, continue to expand and improve.

Currently the site contains information about your NJAA Board of Directors, NJAA contests and scholarships, entry deadlines and show dates, and NJAA news; however, plans are underway to introduce NJAA Talk, a bulletin board for NJAA members. This feature would allow YOU to post questions and inquiries for response by fellow NJAA members, as well as others showing an interest in the NJAA.

But that's not all. We want to know what you think! What changes would you like to see made to the Web site? E-mail your thoughts to Lindsey Trospen, communications director, at sc2076@sc.stephens.edu. We look forward to hearing from you.

1999 NJAS: Juniors get their kicks on Route 66

Junior Angus enthusiasts from across the country traveled down Route 66 as the Oklahoma Junior Angus Association welcomed them "Back to Tulsa," to compete for top honors at the National Junior Angus Show (NJAS) in Tulsa, Okla., July 7-12.

Don Boggs, Brookings, S.D., selected the champion owned female from the 638 entries. Top honors in this division went to Dameron PVF Proven Queen 822, exhibited by Jason Michael, Mount Solon, Va.

Jim Pipkin, Springfield, Mo., evaluated the 212 bred-and-owned females, 55 bred-and-owned bulls and 49 cow-calf pairs. Champion bred-and-owned female was Dameron Bardot 8144, exhibited by Julie Dameron, Lexington, Ill. Womack's Stockman 2178 claimed top honors in the bred-and-owned bull division for Wesley Womack, Pembroke, Ky. Tanya Peebles, Lawrenceville, Va., captured the champion cow-calf pair title with Dalton's Elba 6181.

Dave Duello, Clarkesville, Ga. selected a champion steer from the 36 entries. A son of WK Online won championship honors for Kami Krebs, Gordon, Neb. Competitors also entered 39 carcass steers at the event. Mary Kendrick, Southlake, Texas, entered the winning animal.

The NJAS is not only the world's largest single-breed cattle show, it gives junior Angus members an opportunity to participate in numerous educational events. The purpose of these contests is to challenge juniors to develop new ideas and explore new challenges within the Angus industry. The National Junior Angus Association (NJAA) conducts a variety of annual contests at the NJAS to help its members develop into the leaders and producers of tomorrow. The contests held this year at the 1999 NJAS were showmanship, the Auxiliary-sponsored *Certified Angus Beef*TM Cook-Off, photography, graphic design, extemporaneous speaking, prepared public speaking, team sales and poster.

The NJAS also serves as an opportunity for state associations to pull together and show off the teamwork and dedication they have developed. To recognize state associations, the NJAA has three contests — scrapbook, herdsmanship and sweepstakes.

Many junior Angus members were also awarded college scholarships for their outstanding involvement with the breed, leadership abilities and scholastic achievements. The Angus Foundation awarded thirteen $1,000 scholarships and two $2,500 scholarships. The Certified Angus Beef (CAB) Program and the NJAA together awarded a $1,000 scholarship.

The NJAS was and always will be a fun-filled opportunity for Angus enthusiasts to come together and show off the quality cattle and talents each exhibitor and state possess.

Leathermans named advisors of the year

Every year we have the opportunity to recognize our Advisors of the Year. This year we have a couple, William and Lucille Leatherman, who truly demonstrate what it takes to be advisors. State junior Angus advisors are special people who take on the responsibility of challenging, motivating, guiding and disciplining associations in an appropriate manner. The Leathermans have gone above and beyond these duties. They have become a part of the North Carolina and National Junior Angus Association family.

William and Lucille started traveling to national shows with the North Carolina juniors to show their support. As they traveled, they became more active in the junior programs. Through their involvement, strength and support they have helped the North Carolina Junior Angus Association grow and develop valuable skills that will last a lifetime. They have made a positive impact although their own daughter was grown.

William and Lucille Leatherman, Lexington, N.C., were recognized by the NJAA as Advisors of the Year. The Leathermans were honored for dedication to junior programs and activities. Presenting the award is Hutch Porter, retired NJAA Board member.

Thank you, Leathermans, for making a difference in so many lives.
